C. B. BROTHER

Poetry.

Veritas.

BY SARAH H. BROWNE.

"What is truth?"—Pontious Pilate.

Yes, Pilate, yes—it is the old, old question,
Springing alike from Roman, Greek and Jew,
Forever asked, yet ever left unanswered—
Forever old, and yet forever new!

From the dim twilight of forgotten ages,
We hear its whisper, fitful, low and weak;
But gathering voice, on Time's great tides descending,
It comes at length with trumpet tongue to speak!

'Tis but the groping of the soul within us,
To find its clue through doubt's bewildering maze,
The cry for light, amid'st the storm and darkness—
The call for help which night-bound travelers raise!

And, though in Pilate's time, an old, old question,
We still repeat it in our distant day;
For Truth, though "grand and mighty and prevailing,"
Eludes our grasp, pursue her as we may!

Selected Story.

"I Will if You Will."

The Kay House is a pleasant little hotel, standing half way up the side of a mountain in New Hampshire

In the parlor there, one July evening, were four people—Mrs. St. John and her daughter Elly, Miss Emily May and Mr. Milburn. As Elly St. John went to the piano, these two last slipped out on the balcony, and stood listening as Elly sung:

"Could we forget, could we forget!
O! that Lethe were running yet,
The past should fade like a morning dream,
In a single drop of holy stream.
Ah! we know what you would say,
But we are too tired to hope or pray:
For, hurt with ceaseless jaw and fret,
Body and soul cannot forget.

"Can they forget, will they forget
When they shall reach the boundry set,—
When with the final pang and strain
We are parted never to meet again?
Ever to them shall rest be given,
Sensless in earth, or happy in Heaven?
That which has been it might be yet
If we could only learn to forget;
But the stars shall cease to rise and set,
And fall from Heaven ere we forget."

Elly sung with an intensity and pathos which borrowed none of its force from within, for she was a good-natured, inconsequent sort of a girl, who had never had a trouble in her life. The gift of musical expression is often quite independent of feeling or experience. Elly's music hurt Emily cruelly, and stirred and roused the old sorrow which had but just begun to fall asleep for a little. She had loved deeply and fondly a man who had grown tired of her and left her, because he was greatly her inferior.

Much as she suffered I rejoiced when her engagement with Lewis Leighton was broken. I had known Lewis from his earliest childhood, and I had always disliked him as a selfish, conceited pig. The last I heard of him he had turned Catholic, and joined the Jesuits; and I only hope he got well snubbed during his novitiate. Had Miss May married him, her disappointment would have been unspeakably greater than it was. As she leaned over the balcony while Elly sung, and looked out into shadows and starlight, her heart was rung as with the first anguish of loss. "Oh God!" she said to herself, "when will the bitterness of this death pass?" Then she became conscious that Mr. Milburn was speaking to her; but he had more than half finished what he had to say before she realized that he was asking her to be his wife.

He spoke at a very unfortunate moment. He and Emily had been very good friends that summer. They had wandered in the woods, ascended Mount Washington, and been to Glen Ellis together. She had liked him but she had never dreamed of him as a lover, and when he presented himself in that light she was shocked, and startled, and a little provoked.

"Oh hush!" she said sharply. "It never can be—never!"

"Do you then dislike me so much?" said Evert Milburn, trying very hard to speak quietly.

"No," she said, making an effort to collect her thoughts. "I have liked you—you have been good to me; but all the love I had to give is dead and buried, and there is no resurrection."

He made no answer but she felt that she had hurt him.

"I am very sorry," she faltered; "I never meant——"

"I understand," he said quickly. "It is no one's fault but my own. Good night." And they touched hands and parted,

Evert went up to his own room, where his friend Dick Bush, was sitting in the dark. Dick was a boy of nineteen. He had been trying to work his way through college, and had worn himself out in the effort, and Mr. Milburn had brought him to the mountains for his vacation. Dick made a hero of Evert, and he had been mortally jealous of Emily May.

"Dick," said Mr. Milburn, after a little, "we will go over to the Glen to-morrow."

And then Dick understood the case, and mentally abused Miss May as "a cold-hearted flirt," which epithet she did not at all deserve.

Evert and Dick went away early next morning. Emily heard the stage drive away, and turned her face to her pillow, and thought bitterly of the horrible perverseness of things in this world.

She knew that Evert was good, and manly, and sensible. He was in a fair way to win reputation at the bar, and, if not just handsome, was attractive and gentlemanly.

"There are dozens that would be proud and happy to accept his love; and nothing would do but he must throw it away on me," thought Emily, impatiently. "But it's never worth while to pity men very much. They must get over their troubles very easily, if there is no money lost." From which it may be inferred that Miss May was perhaps a bit of a cynic.

Emily May lived with her mother, in an inland town in New York. She had a little property of her own, and, with what she could earn with her pen, she managed to dress herself, pay for a summer's journey now and then, and keep her own house over her head.

It was her way to look after her sick neighbors, poor or not; to visit, now and then, at the hospital and the county house, and do what her hand found to do. She made no fuss, and laid down no rules, and was under no ecclesiastical "direction" in particular; but I am inclined to think she was as useful, and far more agreeable, than if she he had made herself hideous in a poke bonnet, and committed mental suicide.

When her holiday was over that summer, she came home, and settled quietly down to work.

She was busy at her desk, one day in October, when a carriage drove rapidly up the street, and stopped at the door, and Dick Bush jumped hurriedly out and rang the bell. Emily went to the door herself, upon which Dick's hurry seemed suddenly to subside; and when he came into the parlor, he appeared to find great difficulty in expressing himself, and Emily, greatly wondering, asked after his friend Mr. Miburn.

Dick's tongue was loosed.

"Oh, Miss May," he said, with a shaking voice, "Evert is dying."

"Where? How?" said Emily, startled, and sincerely sorry.

Now Dick had been melodramatically inclined. He had meant to act like the hero of a lady's novel, and administer a severe inflexible reproof to the woman who had trifled with Evert; but in Miss May's presence he found this plan impractible, and wisely refrained.

"He went out shooting with a fool of a boy, and he, the boy, fired wild, and Evert was badly hurt, and fever set in; and, oh! Miss May, he keeps asking for you, and he won't be quiet; and the doctor said, if you could you ought to come, for it might make a difference. There's his note, and Mrs. Milburn's."

The doctor wrote, succinctly, that, considering the state of the case, Miss May's presence might possibly keep the patient quieter, which was all important. Mrs. Milburn's note was an incoherent blotted epistle, begging this unknown young lady to come and save her boy.

Emily could not refuse; her motherhurried her off, and in two hours she was seated beside Dick, on her way to Springfield. Her reflections were not pleasant. Every one would talk, and suppose there was a romance. Elly St. John would be sure to know about it, and Elly was such a little chatter-box; and to try to make a mystery of the matter would be still worse.

Then she had "nothing to wear." And how should she get along with Evert's mother and sister? And who would take the Bible class on Sunday? And what would become of her little book promised for "the spring trade?"

"I dare to say it's all nonsense his wanting me," she thought. "People never mean what they say in a fever. I remember Pat Murphy insisting that he would have a hippopotamous 'handy in the house; and if Mr. Milburn comes to himself, how horribly embarrassing it will be!"

On the whole, Miss May's feelings were rather those of vexation than of romance.

They rode all night, and when Emily reached the door of the handsome old-fashioned house in Springfield, she was conscious of "looking like a fright," and wished herself anywhere else.

The door was no sooner opened than she was embraced by a little old lady in black, and a pretty girl in an elegant morning dress. Both were in tears, and had evidently been for some time on the verge of hysteries; and Emily at once set them down as "the sort of woman who are never of any use."

"Oh, my dear! It is so good of you! So very good of you!" said Mrs. Millburn.

"I am sure you will be his guardian angel," said sentimental Hatty.

"Not at all. Mr. Millburn and I were very good friends, and I shall be very glad if I can do him any good," said Emily, in a very matter-of-course tone; and then the doctor made his appearance, and begged her to come up stairs.

"If he could be kept quiet, there might be a chance for him," said the doctor; "but so much depends on nursing"—and the doctor ended with an expressive silence. Evert was moaning and sobbing, and begging that some one would send Emily May with "one drop of water."

The nurse, who, to Emily's critical eyes, looked anything but capable, was fussing over him in a way that was enough in itself to drive a sane person mad. Emily poured out a goblet of water with a steady hand, and as the ice tinkled against the side of [illegible] held it to his lips.

"There is water," she said, in her ordinary sweet, cheery voice. "Now if you will try to be quiet, I will stay with you."

She could not tell whether he recognized her or not, but the nervous, feverish distress and excitement seemed in some measure to subside; and, after a time, he was comparatively quiet.

Now nursing a wounded man in a fever sounds very romantic in a novel; but, in its real details, it is anything but a romantic business.

Emily May, at Evert Millburn's bedside, felt herself in an entirely false position; but she took care of him, for there was nothing else to be done. The nurse went off in a huff with Miss May and the doctor; Mrs. Millburn and Hatty could only cry and rustle about, and overset things with their dresses. Evert would grow restless as soon as Emily left him, so that the charge, in spite of herself, fell into her hands.

Happily Mrs Millburn and Hatty were not jealous. On the contrary, they admired Emily extremely, and were very grateful and affectionate.

Before the end of the week, Evert came to himself.

"I have dreamed you were here," he said, with a faint smile. "Now I see it is you, and no phantom."

The delirium had gone, but the doctor said nothing encouraging. Evert insisted on hearing the exact truth; and learned at last that he might possibly live a few days, but not longer.

Then, to Emily's wonder and dismay, Evert entreated that, for the little time there was remaining, she would take his name. His heart was set on this idea, and he pleaded, for what seemed such a useless boon, with a vehemence that seemed likely to hasten the last moments. Mrs. Millburn and Hatty seconded the petition with tears, and were sure that "darling Emily" would not refuse dear Evert's last request.

Emily did what nine women out of ten would have done in the same case, and consented.

"What harm can it do?" she thought, "it is only a mere form, but it gives me the right to be with him to the end, and will prevent any talk; and he is so good, and has loved me so well; and if it comforts him now to think that my name will be Millburn instead of May, why should I refuse?" And then it crossed her mind that a widow's cap would be very becoming to her, and she hated herself because this silly notion had come to her unbidden, and twisted up her hair tight and plain, and went to meet the clergyman in her old black mohair, which had become considerably spotted down the front in the course of her nursing.

The rite was made as short as possible and then Mrs. Millburn sent every one away, and for two days the bride stood over the bridegroom, and fought against death till she was ready to faint.

The doctor gave up the patient entirely, and ceased to do anything; and, as sometimes happens in like cases, he took a turn for the better; and slowly the balance trembled, the scale inclined, and life had won.

"I'll tell you what it is," said the doctor, "your wife has saved your life."

Evert turned his head on the pillow, and looked for Emily; but she had slipped away into the next room where she sat down, feeling, for the first time, with a strange shock, that she was actually married. What should she do? What could she say? How could she tell Evert, after all, that she had only come to him as she would have gone to Pat Murphy, if he had sent for her, and consented to that marriage rite as she had lent her silver candlesticks to hold Father Flanagan's blessed candles when Judy Murphy died?

The doctor went down stairs; and presently Mrs. Millburn and Hatty came to her, and overwhelmed her with embraces and gratitude, and a point applique set, and fragmentary talk about her "things," and proposals to send for her mother, all mingled together. Emily resolutely put away thought for the time, but she could not help feeling, in an odd surprised way, that she was not unhappy, and despised herself for having a sort of ashamed, furtive interest in those "things," which Mrs. Millburn and Hatty were longing to provide.

A week after that day, Evert was allowed to sit up in his easy chair, white and wan enough, but with a look of returning health and life. Emily was sitting almost with her back to him, looking out into the tossing leafless branches of the great elm.

"Emily," said Mr. Millburn, at last.

"Yes," she answered quietly, but she did not turn her head.

"Emily, I did not mean to get well."

No answer from Mrs. Millburn.

"I know how much you must feel what has happened. Believe me, I will take no advantage of your goodness; I will set you free as soon as I can. My only wish is to spare you trouble; I will take all blame on myself. I know you are longing to be away; and why should I delay what must come at last? I dare say Dick and Mrs. Macy, the nurse can do all I need now."

"Oh, if you prefer Mrs. Macy's attendance, I am sure it is nothing to me," said Emily, in a remarkably cross manner.

"You are angry with me, but there need be no difficulty dear. You came away so hurriedly that it would be perfectly natural for you to return to your mother now."

But here, to Evert's dismay, Emily hid her face, and began to cry in quite a passionate and distressful fashion. Evert rose with difficulty, and went to her,—it was not more than three steps.

"Do you want to kill yourself?" she said through her sobs, and she took hold of him and made him sit down, and then turned away, and laid her head on the window seat.

"What can I do?" he said, distressed.

"It's too bad! Oh, it's too bad!" she said in the most unreasonable way.

"I know it Emily. You are as free as though no word had ever passed between us. Do you want to go to-day? I will make it easy for you with mother and Hattie," he said with a pang.

"I—I didn't think I was so very disagreeable." The words dropped out one by one, between her sobs. "But, of course, if you don't want me—"

"Emily! What do you mean? Will you stay? Will you really try to care for me?" he asked, with a sudden light in his eyes.

"I don't know. I—did think—as matters are, we might try to make the best of it," she said in the faintest whisper, while the color ran to her finger ends.

"You will?"

burn, with a sweet, shy smile.

And she kept her word.—Aldine for April.

POPULAR EDUCATION NO. 2.

The New England Puritans brought over with them and planted the germ of the spirit of popular education on the soil of America; and, although it has from that time up to the present day been carefully nurtured, it has not yet attained its growth sufficient to enable every child within the broad domain to partake of its fruits, and personally participate in its blessings. The necessity of reaching this result has, however, always been felt by thinking minds, and its consumation is at present an absorbing theme by all who regard with zeal a prosperous future for the people and the Government of the United States.

Popular education and republican government are inseperable. Impressed with this great truth, WASHINGTON, in his farewell address, said to people of his country: "Promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opioion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened." JOHN ADAMS, in his inaugural, declared his high regard for "the wisdom and generosity of the legislature in making liberal appropriations in money for the benefit of schools." THOS. JEFFERSON said he "looked to the diffusion of light and education as the resources most to be relied on for ameliorating the condition, promoting the virtue, and advancing the happiness of man." MADISON believed "learned institutions ought to be the favorite objects with every free people." RUSH, J. DEWITT CLINTON, and, in fact, nearly all the great minds in the past were deeply impressed with the importance of popular education, and labored for its attainment. Chancelor KENT insisted that "the parent who sends his son into the world uneducated defrauds the community of a lawful citizen, and bequeaths to it a nuisance." The champion of the mental culture of the masses, HORACE MANN, said that "for augmenting the aggregate amount of intelligence and mental power in any community the grandest instrumentality ever yet devised is the institution of common schools." On another occasion he stated his faith in this sentiment in the following language: "The theory of our government is not that all men, however unfit, shall be voters, but that every man, by the power of reason the sense of duty, shall become fit to be a voter. Education must bring the practice as near as possible to the theory. As the children now are so will the sovereigns be. How can we expect the fabric of the government to stand if vicious materials are daily wrought into its framework? Education must prepare our citizens to become municipal officers, intelligent jurors, honest witnesses, legislators, or competent judges of legislation; in fine, to fill all the manifold relations of life. The whole land must be watered with the stream of knowledge."

Congress and the State legislatures have done much to aid the people in carrying into practice the theory of universal education; but the impediments to progress in the past have been serious. The institution of slavery, the annual influx of nearly half a million of immigrants, and the indifference of the ignorant have retarded the work. These barriers are, however, disappearing before the progress of events. The first has been wholly removed; the increase of popular education in Europe is giving us a more intelligent class of foreign-born citizens; and the prejudice against, and indifferance toward, free schools is changing rapidly into a zeal into their favor.

THE TIDE TURNING.

As the climate, soil and productions of this Albemarle region are being understood in the North, immigration is attracted this way. And then it should be impressed upon our friends in the Northern and Eastern States that the old notion of its being as much of a journey to visit us as to take a trip across the Atlantic is all a mistake. Ah, we well remember how ready many of our old acquaintances used to be to pick up their "carpet bags" and make a trip to the West, while they would have hesitated a long while before going South, because of the vision they had of long, tedious travel and days, and months from home. The truth is, they are nearer home here than in the West. It don't take as much time, nor does it cost as much money to make a trip to North Carolina as to Illinois, Indianna, or the other points toward which the tide of immigration has been drawn. Just as these facts become known will this tide turn. It will do it certain.

In Fremont, Nebraska, you can buy corn at ten cents a bushel, potatoes at thirty cents, eggs at twelve cents a dozen, and beef at ten cents a pound.—Exchange.

But it is rather far to go to market. Nor do the prices pay the producer.

THE RESOURCES OF NORTH CAROLINA.—HOW TO DEVELOPE THEM.

The resources of North Carolina are boundless. The intelligent capitalist are being directed to and attracted by them. An observant Englishman, who has lately taken up his residence in this State, gives a few practical hints and suggestions which are to the point. He says:

"When an emigrant lands in this country it is curious to observe how considerate the Northern people are to get engineers, millwrights, carpenters, machinists, etc., to locate anywhere but down South. I have been in this country some years, having labored as engineer, millwright, pattern maker, &c., in different sections, say, Boston, Jersey and New York, and if I had not ventured here in North Carolina my ignorance would have remained. I find here in North Carolina land to be had in abundance and if it could be divided into farms of 20 to 40 acres each, with a house upon them, a system of immigration might be encouraged to North Carolina that would induce Englishmen to come here gladly. The following trades could be wrought here to great advantage: Cotton spinners, hose and shirt makers, bleachers and trimmers, cotton weavers, Indiarubber weavers; and, if finer sorts of cotton were spun to suit, the lace trade might be transfersed here from Nottingham. Now, to begin, say the cotton spinners are introduced first. The following would be required: One picker, one carding machine, one doubling frame, one driving frame, one improving frame and one spinning frame. The Carolina wool would help. You could get the best merino fabric out of the cotton and wool; so good that I am persuaded no better merino could be made in the world. This would induce farmers to grow clover and turnip for keeping sheep. The machinery for making hose, shirts, drawers, pants, ladies' under vests, &c., can all be bought very cheap to what they could some years ago, and the working of them is no difficulty.

Now what is to hinder some of the above trades being wrought in Elizabeth City? Moderate sized establishments, to make real good articles, are not only possible but would be profitable. Instead of sending money from the South to the North, let us make our own goods. We can do it. There is no fairer opening anywhere. Let it be done.

The bill dividing this State into two Districts was prevented from becoming a law by a curious accident. It was carried through the House, and returned from the Senate with an unimportant amendment, in which the House concurred without discussion. But in the confusion incident to the closing hours of the session, the Speaker forgot to sign it, and it was sent to the President bearing the signature of the Vice-President alone. The oversight was not discovered until it was too late to rectify it, and accordingly the Old North State must continue a single district for some time longer.

The Southern people are deeply interested in the establishment of manufactories to work up their cotton. It is said that, while the cotton crop of the Carolinas sell for $10,000,000, it would be worth $30,000,000 if it were manufactured in the States; and, in addition, it would give constant employment to the people. They are beginning to see a most important fact, which people in other parts of our country would do well to consider: "that a purely agricultural people can never have anything that deserves the name of agriculture."—Tribune.

That is so. And there is no more eligible place for a Cotton Factory than right here at Elizabeth City.

We learn that Gov HENDRICKS of Indiana has recently been in Washington, and an inquisitive correspondent has discovered that his mission is the organization of a new party. According to this veracious chronicler, the Governor's plan is to abandon the name and organization of the Democratic party, and to put forth a formal recognition of the death of past issues, with a declaration of liberal principles for the future. What the name of the new party is to be, is not disclosed.

We some times hear people talk about great "presence of mind." The story of the ingenuous Montana miner is the latest instance in point. He had fallen out. We were always falling out, but that day we went and made up, and took a drink together, and everything was lovely. I kinder thought it wouldn't last, and so on the spur of the moment, right on the spot, I borrowed twenty-five dollars of him. That's what I call presence of mind." We wonder who wouldn't.

A cotemporary is spending a good deal of time in writing up what a good place his town is to live in. It is legitimit. If Solom had been blessed with half the neat qualities claimed by our brother of the quill it would not have perished, nor would Lot's poor wife have been compelled to stand in pillory and point a salutary and saline moral for all time and women.

The agricultural products of North Carolina are most varied. There is scarcely a plant necessary to the existence of mankind that cannot be raised in the Old North State. In addition to our staple productions of cotton, corn and wheat, our soil is admirably adapted to the cultivation of Fruits of every description.

Ex Senator CATTELL, of New Jersey, has been selected to go abroad as the confidential agent for the Treasury Department, in connection with the exchange of the bonds and the transfer of the proceeds of the new loan. The appointment will be recognized as a very proper one.

A big ruffian in Boston undertook, the other night, to bully a servant girl left alone in a house into getting him a dinner. She went for him with a carving knife, and he went away as hungry as he came.

The number of persons out of employment in Philadelphia is appaling. One insertion of a little advertisement for a clerk in a railroad office brought 685 applicants in a single day.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania has appropriated One Million Dollars for the Centenial Exhibition.

New Books, Periodicals, &c.

OLD AND NEW:—The April number of theis excellent magazine contains a remarkable supply of spirited and entertaining papers. Two new serial novels are begun,—one by an American, and one by an Englishman. The former is Mr. Frederic B. Perkins's story of "Scrope, or The Lost Library," which opens with a close and accurate picture of the fun and earnest of book-auctions in New York city, and gives hints of kleptomania and various other "modern improvements." The latter, by Mr. F. C. Burnand, the well-known humorist, and author of the "Happy Thought" books, is in the form of an autobiography, beginning with the birth of the hero. There are two papers of a natural history sort: one in particular, entitled "Some Cats I have known," is very funny in many places. Mr. T. G. Appleton has a quaint and thoughtful sketch, entitled "The Two Monks." There is a lively story of the mining-districts by the late Frederic Wadworth Loring, and a quite successful apology for what is called "Red Tape," by Mr. J. B. Mann. Mr. F. S. Fiske discusses the Spanish republic, expression good hopes for its future; and there is a curious disquisition, of a philological nature, by Mr. A. H. Louis. Joaquin Miller, the well-abused and much-praised, contributes a short poem on Westminister Abbey; and Caroline M. Hewins has another, very fresh and musical and and graceful, called "What the Oak Thinks," The Music Review, a new department, gives unusually sincere and instructive accounts of new musical publications; and the other departments are as spirited as usual. The editorial introductions this month are two,—the first considering the important question of the limitations of government, with an incidental assertion that there are two sides to the Oakes-Ames question; and the Examiner Introduction, outlining a distinct theory of newspapers, and looking a little at the habitual claims of the so-called "metropolitan" papers to govern the country, and people's minds, and the universe generally.

THE TURF, FIELD AND FARM:—This valuable journal is one of the best of its kind in the country. It is devoted to the interests of the Turf, the Field and the Farm, and is the advocate of that kind of sport which ennobles and never degrades. Its aim is high, its tone is dignified and it is doing much good. It says that as the people demand out-door pastimes it is surely better to have them conducted on a moral than on an immoral basis.

CORRESPONDENCE

From a Former Citizen of this Section.

DUBLIN, IND., 3rd mo. 24th, 1873

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

I miss the CAROLINIAN so much I must request thee to again send me a copy. Enclosed please find the amount for balance of present year. We have many pleasant associations connected with Elizabeth City and vicinity. The rememberance of the sociability of the inhabitants, the mild, pleasant climate in winter, the stirring energy of your people to-day, compared to the days of slavery and the opening greatness of Eastern North Carolina lead us to watch with interest the upward progress of our native country. I desire the encouragement of your worthy townsman Dr. Underwood, whose indomitable energy and enthusiasm is just what you need to keep pace with your sister States of the West. Cherish then, such energy and it will penetrate your fair garden as it has done the solitary wilds of the Rocky mountains, with Railroads, inmigration, thrift, and their attendant wealth.

Very truly thy friend,
J. T. WHITE.

Egypt is no longer "the basest of kingdoms." Recent information shows that some of its cities have increased with more than American rapidity. When Napoleon the First was in Alexandria the city contained 7,000 inhabitants, in 1842 this number was nearly nine times as great, twenty years later the population had risen to 164,000, and the consular reports for 1872 place its population at 300,000. The increase throughout Northern Egypt has been in a like proportion, and the country now contains more than five millions of people. This is due in a good degree to the British overland route to India, and the enterprises of French engineers and agriculturists.

A NEW ERA IN JOURNALISM.

THE GREAT ACHIEVEMENT OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC

All the News and Full of Pictures.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is the title of a newspaper, published in New York, which is achieving the most remarkable journalistic success ever chronicled. It is an eight-page evening paper (three editions daily), elegantly printed, and conducted by the ablest editorial talent attainable.

As a newspaper THE DAILY GRAPHIC stands in the first rank, and contains regularly

THE VERY LATEST AND FULLEST NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Its great feature consists in the fact that it is not only a newspaper, but an illustrated newspaper as well. Four of its pages are filled with choice reading matter—telegrams, editorials, general and local news, items, gossip, and correspondence on the freshest and most interesting topics. The remaining four pages consist of executed in the most faultless and artistics style, and portraying accurately and fully all leading events within twenty-four hours after their occurrence. Those who have made journalism a study, and fully appreciate the great enterprise manifested in the collection and publication of news by the aid of the telegraph, steam presses, and the development of journalistic talent, have been fond of advancing the theory that the next advance in that field would result in a newspaper furnishing in its regular issues pictures of all current prominent events. That theory is a theory no longer; the newspaper of the future is the newspaper of to-day, and that paper is THE DAILY GRAPHIC. The processes which render this marvellous acheivement an existing fact are the result of the most carefull study and an endless variety of experiments, gradually perfected during the past twelve years. They depend upon improvements in lithographic and the application of the photographic camera. By their aid a picture is engraved and made ready to print in from twenty minutes to two hours. Costly and elaborate plates, works of art, scenes of interest, are rep oduced and pictured forth with equal facility and the most scrupulous fidelity. Illustrations of leading events are engraved and prepared for the press even before the accompanying written narrative or description leaves the hands of the compositor.

For the proper practical working of so great an enterprise, THE GRAPHIC COMPANY was formed, with

CAPITAL OF $500,000 IN GOLD, months and months before the first issue of THE DAILY GRAPHIC, the most extensive preperations were made, and to-day THE GRAPHIC COMPANY has

The Largest and most Complete Newspaper Establishment in the United States.

In the great work of illustrating the events of the day an extensive corps of the best known and most accomplished artists are constantly engaged.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC aims to be in its strictest sense a newspaper. Striving always to be just and truthful, it discusses all questions independently and impartially. It is not the organ of any party, sect, or creed. It is always high-toned, and contains nothing to offend any taste. Its contents give it an immense advantage over the "old fashioned" papers. The annual subscriber gets a volume of twenty-for hundred pages, constituting a valuable record of events and a graphic panorama of our time and progress. It possesses not merely a local interest, but is a paper for every reader of the language. It is, emphatically,

BANKRUPTCY.

THE FIFTY PER CENT. CLAUSE.

As there seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to the effect of the provision of the Bankrupt Act, commonly called the 50 per cent. clause, we publish the following extracts from the Act:

The second clause of the tairty-third section as amended by the Act of July 27, 1868, provides "that no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate upon which he shall be liable as the principal debtor, unless the assent of writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom he shall have become liable as principal debtor, and who shall have proved their claims, filed in the case at or before the time of hearing of the application for discharge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled—that the provision of the second clause of the thirty-third section of said act as amended by the first section of an act in amendment thereof, approved July 27th, 1868, shall not apply to those debts from which the bankrupt seeks a discharge which were contracted prior to January 1st, 1869.

The true meaning is not that a bankrupt must be able to pay fifty per cent of all his debts, before he can obtain a discharge, as many believe; but that his estate, in the hands of his assignee, at the time of the discharge, must be equal, to fifty per cent. of the amount of the debts.

Local and Personal.

☞'Dio' will appear next week.

☞Early corn planting has commenced.

☞In a neighboring town a man called another a liar the other day. The defamer immediately became a lier—on the floor.

☞Talk is cheap. Castles in the air are easily built. It is work that is needed. The men who act are what we want And they are coming.

☞Mr. N. R. ZIMMERMAN's new Pile Driver is in full operation. It does its work effectively. The wharves on Water Street are being repaired.

☞Hon. C. L. COBB has handed us a letter from the Adjutant General containing important news to colored soldiers. We publish it in another column.

☞By advertisement in this issue of the NORTH CAROLINIAN it will be seen that the Government property at Plymouth, N. C., will be sold on the 1st day of May.

☞All kind of fish—shad, herring, perch and rock—are plenty and cheap. Millions are beginning to pour into the Northern markets from our Sounds and Rivers.

☞Our reporter informs us that the maddest man in town is ——. He wound up his clock regularly for fifteen years and then discovered that it was an eight day clock!

☞"Without the aid of advertisements I could have done nothing in speculations. I have the most complete faith in printer's ink. Advertising is the royal road to business."—Barnum.

☞Through the efforts of the officers of the Dismal Swamp Steam Transportation Company, arrangements have been made by which through tickets to and from Baltimore can be procured. This will be a great convenience. The price has been reduced to Six Dollars.

☞To "RETTIE'S" inquiry we can't make satisfactory answer. The "land of contentment" isn't geographically defined—at least it is not laid down on the map. JOSH BILLINGS says; "it iz an imaginary place not settled yet, and those reach it soonest who throw away their compass and go it blind."

☞The Gates County Court is in session this week. Judge WATTS, who has exchanged with Judge ALBERTSON, presides. The case of the State against CHARLES W. ATKINS for the murder of GEO. W. THOMPSON is on trial. This case was transferred to Gates from Hertford county.

☞Our Northern visitors are all pleased with our town, our country and our people. Our people are equally favorably impressed. This social intercourse is accomplishing much. It not only removes prejudices but inspires a fraternal feeling that is bound to turn the tide of immigration Southward.

☞Our exchanges from the North, East and West are full of complaints about the severity of the weather. They all insist that Old Winter has been lingering in the lap of Spring long enough. They even go so far as to intimate that if the fair maiden had the degree of modesty which is becoming to her sex, she would have sent the old dotard about his business before this time.

☞We have seen a couple of verry ingenious inventions made by our townsman GEO. W. BAKER. They are not only ingenious but they are useful. The one is a Log Turner for which he has a Patent. It is very simple and yet it is so convenient and practical as to do the work and save the expense of two hands in a Saw Mill. The other is a Log Lifter, a machine to raise logs out of the water. It does its work effectively. Mr. BAKER is quite a genius and he turns his inventive talent to account.

☞We are not a Theologian nor do we discuss theological questions in these columns, and yet we have settled opinions upon the subject broached by an earnest correspondent whose name and communication are withheld. True piety does not necessarily induce hard featured moroseness, nor is the genuine article found in company with perpetual sourness. Our idea of religious contemplation is that it does not chill the generous impulse nor harden the heart, but rather warms the one and softens the other. The light of truth does not fall on its victims like a miasma but comes down like the gentle refreshing dew.

☞The Schooner "Dick Williams" referred to in our last arrived on Wednesday. She was loaded with coal and merchandize for BRODRICK & SMITH. She had a boisterous and protracted voyage of 33 days. We learn that she was detained by ice 15 days in the Delaware, was afterwards blown off and encountered a storm in the Gulf Stream for ten days, and, to complete her misfortunes and delays, she was detained by adverse winds and tides for near a week at Hatteras Swash. But Captain CARSON, being an able and experienced mariner, brought both vessel and cargo safely through and in good condition.

☞Another of the older citizens of Elizabeth City has departed—Mrs. SARAH LAVERTY, relict of the late CHAS. M. LAVERTY. She was on a visit to her son-in-law Dr. SMITH in Hertford, and died on Friday last, aged about 72 years. Her remains were brought to this place and interred on Sunday.

☞To "House Keeper's" inquiry we would say that the proprietor of one of the oldest silver establishments in the city of Philadelphia says that "housekeepers ruin their silver by washing it in soap suds; it makes it look like pewter." Never put a particle of soap about your silver, then it will retain its original lustre When it wants polish take a piece of soft leather and whitening, and rub hard.

Connecticut manufactures about half of all the carriage trimmings, cutlery and edge tools, hardware, plated ware, spectacles and eyeglasses made in the United States.

The Winston Sentinel tells of a man who went to Colorado to better his fortune, looked around awhile and came back, declaring that North Corolina was worth a dozen Colorados. He says that there is more talk there of coming to North Carolina than there is here of going out there.

A man in Wilmington, Del., lately concluded to escape from all his woes by leaping into the river, but the water was so cold that he gave it up and struck out vigorously for the shore. He will probably wait till summer before attempting suicide again, or cut his throat with a ruler or some other harmless implement.

The News says that Prof. W. C. Kerr, our State Geologist, is preparing a large agricultural and mineralogical map of this State for exhibition at the grand International Exposition at Vienna. The topography of the State will be delineated. Its valys, mountains, rivers, etc., will be shown, together with the division of the soil, etc. In short all statistics necessary to a complete knowledge of the State will be given.

Several days during the month of February, were days of dense darkness in London. Those who have not been in London during a fog, have no idea of its gloom. At noon the gas blazes in all counting-rooms; the railway stations are lighted up exactly as at night; along the banks of the Thames, thieves and highwaymen rob and assault with impunity; men walk off the quays into the docks; many accidents occur from collisions in driving; jeweller's windows are smashed, the precious contents bagged, and the robbers vanish around the corner; on such a day many wretches find life insupportable and leap from the bridges to end their existence, into the cold and dirty Thames. On February 12th, a London paper said, "We have not seen daylight for a week."

The question of Local Option, which has just been voted upon by the people of Pennsylvania, bids fair to come before them again in a different form. The vote on the 21st ult. was cast under a law passed by the present Legislature, allowing each ward and township to decide whether it would have license or prohibition during the next three years. The preponderance was largely in favor of license. On the same day an amendment was adopted in the Constitutional Convention, prohibiting the sale of "intoxicating liquors, or mixtures thereof containing the same, for use as a beverage," and directing the Legislature, within one year from the adoption of the Constitution, to enact laws with adequate penalties for the enforcement of this provision. This section will be submitted to a seperate vote of the whole State It will be free from the doubt of constitutionality which was raised against Local Option, and, it is thought, will receive a fuller vote than previous measures of the kind.

Half Alive.

It is a sad thing to pass through life only half alive. Yet there are thousands whose habitual condition is one of languor and debility. They complain of no specific diseases; they suffer no positive pain; but they have no relish for anything which affords mental or sensuous pleasure to their more robus and energetic fellow-beings.

In nine cases out of ten this state of lassitude and torpor arises from a morbid stomach. Indigestion destroys the energy of both mind and body. When the waste of nature is not supplied by a due and regular assimilation of the food, every organ is starved every function interrupted.

Now, what does common sense suggest under these circumstances of depression? The system needs rousing and strengthening; not merely for an hour or two, to sink afterwards into a more pitiable condition than ever (as it assuredly would do if an ordinary alcoholic stimulant was resorted to), but radically and permanently!

How is this desirable object to be accomplished? The answer to this question, founded on the unvarying experience of a quarter of a century, is easily given. Infuse new vigor into the digestive organs by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Do not waste time in administering temporary remedies, but wake the system up by recuperating the fountain head of physical strength and energy, the great organ upon which all the other organs depend for their nurture and support.

By this time that a dozen doses of the great vegetable tonic and invigorant have been taken, the feeble frame of the dyspeptic will begin to feel its benign influence. Appetite will be created, and with appetite the capacity to digest what it craves. Perseverance until the cure is complete—until healthful blood, fit to be the material of flesh and muscle, bone and nerve and brain, flows through the channels of circulation, instead of the watery pabulum with which they have heretofore been imperfectly nourished.

Beware of Counterfeits!

JOB MOSES' SIR JAMES CLARKE'S FEMALE PILLS

are extensively COUNTERFEITED. Dishonest Druggists endeavor to sell the counterfeits to make greater profits. The genuine have the name of Job Moses on each package. Allothers are worthless imitations. The GENUINE Pills are unfailing in the cure of all those painful and dangerous diseases to which the female constitution is subject. They moderate all excesses and remove all obstructions, from whatever cause.

TO MARRIED LADIES

they are particularly suited. They will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity; and although very powerful, contain nothing hurtful to the constitution. In all cases of Nervous and Spinal Affections, Pains in the Back and Limbs, Fatigue on slight exertion, Palpitation of the Heart, Hysterics and Whites, they will effect a cure when all other means have failed. The circulars around each package give full directions and advice, or will be sent free to all writing for them, sealed from observation.

N. B.—In all cases where the GENUINE cannot be obtained, One Dollar enclosed to the Sole Proprietor, JOB MOSES, 18 Cortlandt St., New York, will insure a bottle of the genuine Female Fifty Pills, by return mail, securely sealed from any knowledge of its contents.

Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

The Importance of Alkalies to Agriculture.

The poverty of our farms is owing in a great degree to the removal of the alkalies; and the analysis of vegetable matter demonstrates that alkalies form a much greater component part than lime, and yet the sentiment is frequently advanced that lime is the basis of all agricultural improvement. But this opinion is owing to the fact that it has been more generally used for improvement than the alkalies, because it is more readily obtained and the cost is less. But the good effects of lime are not solely owing to the deficiency of lime in the soil, but its beneficial effects may be attributed, in a great degree, to liberating the potash and soda that so largely exist as constituents of vegetable organization

The application of marl or lime to land act on the vegetable matter in the soil, decomposes this matter and renders it soluble, so that it may be appropriated and assimulated by the growing crops. This decomposed vegetable matter is composod of mineral plant food and atmospheric plant food in a fit condition, after being dissolved by water, to be appropriated by the growing crops. I have seen after the use of marle spots ten to twenty feet square apparently destitute of vegetable matter, almost a perfect sand bank, which previously had not shown any such condition. I heard a farmer say a few days ago, marl your land and apply pine leaves, and the land soon is restored and capacitated to produce a good crop. Again, by marling fresh land or land recently cleared, the abundant leaves, bark and rotten wood are decayed and a fine crop is the consequence, and clover succeeds invariably well, according to my observation and experience.

Now, this result may be attributed by some to the use of lime, that enters into the organization of the growing crop, but more properly, in my opinion, by decomposing the vegetable matter and rendering it fit to be appropriated by the growing crop. So if we lime or marl there exists a great necessity for the application of vegetable matter in the form of leaves, straw, rotten wood, or from the growth of clover, peas, &c.

So I would conclude that lime and marl applied to land will exhaust all the vegetable matter, without subsequent applications in some form. The fathers may be enriched, but their posterity will be improverished. But there are some considerations to inspire the hope that this inevitable poverty may not necessarily follow.

If we apply the mineral plant food to the soil, may not the atmospheric plant food, by chemical affinity, unite with mineral plant food, and thus the crop receive everything necessary for its growth and development? Every breath of air, every drop of water, every spire of grass and every grain of sand is full of animal life, and consequently affords a source from whence ammonia may be derived; and it is not impossible the time may come that we shall learn to get an abundant supply of ammonia from this great laboratory of nature, the atmosphere.

But some distinguished writers contend that the property of lands is dependent upon acidity, and that lime is beneficial by correcting this acidity, but we deny the fact and challenge the proof. Acid exists in all vegetation, add too numerous to mention. Oxalic acid is necessary to the growth of sheep sorrel; apply lime or marl to land abounding in sorrel and an insoluble oxalate of lime is formed, and the plant cannot grow.

A certain degree of acidity is necessary to the full development of the strawberry. Apply lime or marl to a considerable extent, and it does not attain its usual excellence. Destroy all acidity, and, in my opinion, sterility is the inevitable consequence.—Cor. in Rural Messenger.

Charcoal for Poultry.

The benefit which fowls derive from eating charcoal is, I believe, acknowledged. The method of putting it before them is however, not well understood. Pounded charcoal is not in the shape in which fowls usually find their food, and consequently is not very enticing to them.

I have found that corn burnt on the cob, and the refuse—which consists almost entirely of the grains reduced to charcoal, and still retaining their perfect shape—placed before them, is greedily eaten by them, with a marked improvement in their health, as is shown by the brighter color of their combs, and their sooner producing a greater average of eggs to the flock than before.—S. Rufus Mason in the Poultry World.

Cooked Meat for Fowls

Fowls, as well as dogs, become quarrelsome if fed on raw meat. Besides, cooking makes it more nutritious. When raw, it is rather harsh and crude, compared with the mild natural diet of worms and grubs, which are for the most part soft, and easily dissolved by digestion.

Occasionally, for variety, a little meat may be given raw. Fish, when plenty, is more conveniently given boiled, because in that state the fowls easily pick every morsel from the bones, and no mincing is required. Chandler's scraps have the advantage of being already cooked, and on that account, as well as others, they are excellent.—The Poultry World.

Turkey Raising.

Farmers who live in sparsely-settled districts, abounding in large dry pastures, can afford to give the time of a faithful and intelligent lad the whole summer through, to be devoted exclusively to rearing turkeys. The young broods must be watched as constantly as ever a shepherd watches sheep in a region infested by wolves. Every night, or during the day on the approach of rain, they must be driven to a roomy shed with a tight roof. The mother birds, and the young, can be soon trained to being driven as easily as cows are driven to pasture. Give good forage ground, and keep out of rain and dew, and success is almost certain.—The Poultry World.

Here is a match for the Connecticut dame who could not attend her father's funeral because she was so busily engaged in cleaning her house. Mr. Mortimer Jones, of an interior town in Illinois, having lost the partner of his bosom, solaced himself within twenty-four hours after the sad event, by playing croquet. This proved too much for the sensitive feelings of the vicinage. The widower received a visit from his neighbors, and they brought with them a pucket of tar and a bag of feathers; and did then and there bestow upon Mr. Mortimer Jones a most melancholy suit of mourning. So far from feelling grateful for this, Mr. Jones has sued the donors for damages; but unless he can get a complete jury of widowers found of croquet, we wouldn't give three cents for his verdict.

The list of a deceased Kentuckian's debtors measured eighteen feet.

In presenting my list of lands and other properties for sale, I would say that no section of the United States offers such inducements for capitalisis and emigrants, as this section of North Carolina. A railroad will soon be built to Weldon, putting this place in direct communication by Rail, with the whole United States. This, together with our great fishing, farming and manufacturing interests, and certain early completion of already projected works of improvement for putting in nearer, cheaper and easier communication with the Ocean, will render this one of the most important commercial, and manufacturing points on the Southern country.

Fronting and looking over, as it does, two large sheets of navigable water, where steamers and sailing vessels are constantly passing, carrying freight and passengers to all parts of the country, its location and surroundings, are of the most fascinating and desirable character. There is a fishery on it ready for working a seine 2,500 yards long, and which commands a portion of both streams of water, and can be made immensely profitable. The price charged is low, and the purchase a very desirable one. The buildings consist of a good two-story dwelling and out-houses.

A desirable house and lot in the town of Elizabeth City on the corner of two principal streets, the principal one, and situated in the best business locality in the town. The lot contains about two acres of land, and the buildings consist of a fair dwelling three stories high, containing eight rooms, all in good order, another two story building with four rooms and pantries, dairy, smokehouses, stables, &c. The dwelling has a good cellar under it. There is room on the front lot to erect two good stores, and they would occupy the best stand in the town for merchandize.

is believed by the most inteligent men that much of the suffering, sickness and mortality of mankind is traceable to deficient or faulty nutrition. MISCELLANEOUS.

PROSPECTUS.
THE REPUBLIC.

Believing that the inestimable privileges of self-government guaranteed by the Federal Constitution involve corresponding duties, and that among these are sleepless vigilance and the devotion of the best thoughts and efforts of the citizen in aid of the preservation and developement of our country and institutions, we have determined, in furtherance of these objects, to establish a monthly magazine devoted to the discussion of the science of government and to a review of political events.

Assuming that the legitimate objects of good government is provision for welfare and happiness of the citizen, his physical comfort, educational growth and moral development, THE REPUBLIC will bring to this test all economic questions, political action, and governmental measures.

Holding firmly that in a republic, conducted as ours is, political parties are essential, and that they furnish the best, not to say the only means of that constant and severe scrutiny to which power should always be subjected, THE REPUBLIC will insist that the country is not only safe, but safest with its destiny in the keeping of the Republican party; that measures of reform and progress must be carried forward through its instrumentality, and that its permanent ascendency should be maintained so long as it responds to the demands of enlightened and progressive public opinion.

THE REPUBLIC will avoid unwarranted censure of opponents as well as indiscriminate praise of friends—aiming at that degree of independence and candor which concede justice to both. It will not waste words, influence or power by purely negative criticisms, but will endeavor to promote correct action by affirmatively and plainly showing the better way. True, this line of criticism involves thought, care, investigation—with the exercise of an impartial judgment; but history has conclusively demonstrated that by these means the cause of truth and good government can be best advanced.

THE REPUBLIC will furnish a brief and accurate record of events of political and moral interest, as—

The proceedings of Congress.
The decisions and actions of the Executive Departments.
The action of States and of political bodies of national import.
The progress of material and educational development.
Decisions of the judiciary of political or financial importance and of general application.

The publication being monthly, the record will be made up after the events have transpired and will make, at the close of the year, a volume of accurate and valuable information in convenient form for preservation and reference.

Among the topics claiming discussion will be:

The relative power and jurisdiction of the Federal and State Government; the expansion of territory, revenue, finance, education, industrial schools, postage telegraph, postal savings banks, railway and canal tarnsportation, life and fire insurance, river and harbor improvements, the public health, reforms in the public service, and the establishment of equal civil and political rights. On these and kindred subjects THE REP
